

5

most important things

leaders can do to support virtual working

80% of people report feeling at least as productive working from home

88% of people want to carry on working from home in some capacity long term

But virtual working has its challenges. So how can we:

- Keep people engaged and connected?
- Establish and build trust?
- Create a level playing field?
- Retain and develop our culture?
- Spot and manage conflict?
- Look after wellbeing?
- Achieve our goals?

Distinction

Distilling leading research to bring you top strategies to lead well

1 Set expectations with your team

- Create shared understanding - goals, tasks, work and team processes, members and role
- Formalise communication norms – availability and responsive are key to building team trust

2 Ensure your communication is high quality

- High quality communications are a performance differentiator
- Employers are the most trusted source of information
- Trust goes up when people can hear your voice
- Make time to show compassion and care

3 Default to transparency

- Make all information open and available to everyone
- Set information sharing norms and expectations
- Role model, monitor and reinforce good practice
- Think and work out loud – fill in the gaps for people

4 Be a network broker

- Re-awaken dormant ties
- Build bridges between teams
- Make time for non-task discussions
- Be on your guard for negative talk and quash it quickly

5 Adapt how you manage performance

- Know your team – you are working on inference
- Don't increase monitoring but do hold regular check-ins
- Be aware of bias towards and by virtual team members
- Give people the information so they know how they are doing

